This is what I learn in these three books

King midas is selfish. King midas is not shareful. King midas always begging for more.

Jumping mouse is nice. Jumping mouse is shareful. Jumping mouse is polite.

Raja is mean. Raja is stubborn. Raja is selfish.

If you are genorus you will have a wonderful life . if you greedy you not have wonderful life, you will be all alone and sad.

Jordi

If you are greedy you might lose your friends. The raja wants all of the grain of rice all for himself. BOOK IS CALLED THE GRAIN OF RICE.

King midas is so greedy and so selfish. THE BOOK IS CALLED KING MIDAS.

In "The Jumping Mouse," the jumping mouse is so generous and kind and very nice.

The jumping mouse is kind to give some animals his smell his eyes so now he is blind and his hearing but his friend the magic frog came and turn the mouse to a eagle. Now he lives in the far away land.

If you are nice and generous you will get more friends.

Ja'Don

Being nice is being generous.

The jumping mouse gave his eyes nose and ears to the animals that had disabilities. He got his powers from a magical frog. He also got his way to the faraway land with help by the animals that he gave his body parts to.

On one grain of rice the servant girl was very generous.

She became suspicious about where all the rice went. She found out that the raja was taking it. One day she saw rice falling from the basket on the elephant and she was being nice so she caught it in her skirt and gave it back to the raja. In the end she shared it with the kingdom.

So if you are nice and generous, you will get a lot of friends and give a lot.

Greed is to want everything. The raja in "One Grain of Rice" and "King Midas" are both greedy.

They are both really selfish. They are not really satisfied of what they have. In King Midas his daughter was clueless with his power then he touch her daughter then she turned to gold. The same thing happened to the servant. In "One Grain of Rice" the raja was taking rice and never shared it. He let all the people starve for days with dead crops. Both of them weren't thankful for what they have.

Generous is giving everything you can to others. In "The Jumping Mouse," the mouse is very generous. So is the servant girl in "One Grain of Rice". Both of them sacrifice to give to other people. They are really generous, and at the end of every book they are in, they get a reward. In "The Jumping Mouse" the jumping mouse got to be an eagle. In "One Grain of Rice," the servant girl got to get rice for herself and her family and friends.

If you are really generous, you feel happy about it.
